

MEMOIR

Department of Health and Human Services
Mental Health Administration
4500 Reservoir Road, Bethesda, MD 20814

Casey, Thomas A. D. (1984). Autism: A Personal History.
New York: Basic Books.

Journal of Autism and Developmental Disorders, 14(1), 1-11.

Journal of Autism and Developmental Disorders, 14(1), 1-11.

The first part of this memoir describes the early years of my life, from birth to the age of five. I was born in 1945 in a small town in Pennsylvania. My parents were both teachers, and I grew up in a very structured and disciplined environment. I was a very quiet child, and I had a strong interest in books and learning. I was particularly interested in the natural sciences, and I spent a great deal of time reading and experimenting with various scientific projects. I was also very interested in the arts, and I spent a great deal of time drawing and painting. I was a very curious child, and I had a strong desire to understand the world around me. I was particularly interested in the human mind, and I spent a great deal of time reading and thinking about the various theories and concepts of psychology and philosophy. I was also very interested in the history of science, and I spent a great deal of time reading and thinking about the various theories and concepts of science and technology. I was a very thoughtful child, and I had a strong sense of purpose and direction. I was determined to make a contribution to the world, and I spent a great deal of time working on various projects and ideas. I was also very interested in the human condition, and I spent a great deal of time thinking about the various challenges and opportunities of life. I was a very ambitious child, and I had a strong desire to achieve my goals and dreams. I was particularly interested in the field of psychology, and I spent a great deal of time reading and thinking about the various theories and concepts of psychology and behavior. I was also very interested in the field of education, and I spent a great deal of time reading and thinking about the various theories and concepts of education and teaching. I was a very dedicated child, and I had a strong sense of responsibility and duty. I was determined to do my best in everything I did, and I spent a great deal of time working hard and striving for excellence. I was also very interested in the human condition, and I spent a great deal of time thinking about the various challenges and opportunities of life. I was a very thoughtful child, and I had a strong sense of purpose and direction. I was determined to make a contribution to the world, and I spent a great deal of time working on various projects and ideas. I was also very interested in the human condition, and I spent a great deal of time thinking about the various challenges and opportunities of life. I was a very ambitious child, and I had a strong desire to achieve my goals and dreams. I was particularly interested in the field of psychology, and I spent a great deal of time reading and thinking about the various theories and concepts of psychology and behavior. I was also very interested in the field of education, and I spent a great deal of time reading and thinking about the various theories and concepts of education and teaching. I was a very dedicated child, and I had a strong sense of responsibility and duty. I was determined to do my best in everything I did, and I spent a great deal of time working hard and striving for excellence.

REFERENCES

Casey, Thomas A. D. (1984). Autism: A Personal History.
New York: Basic Books.

Journal of Autism and Developmental Disorders, 14(1), 1-11.

